TRAVEL & ENTERTAINMENT: Center REP presents George Bernard Shaw's Romantic Comedy Arms and the Man

Feb 04, 2012
By Jan Miller
Center REPeritory Company
of Walnut Creek, Calif.
Presents "Arms and the Man," currently playing through February 25.
Directed by Nancy Carlin, Arms and the Man is the fourth main stage
production of Center REP's 45th subscription season.

George Bernard Shaw, the master of wit and social comedy at his most entertaining and romantic. What makes a hero? What makes a good husband? Raina (Maggie Mason) must choose between Captain Bluntschli (Craig Marker), the practical man who prefers chocolates to cartridges and Sergius (Gabriel Marin), the dashing hero of the mistaken cavalry charge that sent Bluntschli climbing into her bedroom window at night. Shaw's most popular play is a charming tale of romance going awry with unexpected turns, mistaken identities and of course, the author's always surprising opinions – on war and marriage, and everything else! The audience is drawn in to the show from the outset, thanks to wonderful performances from each of the three main characters.

Director Nancy Carlin returns to Center RP, having previously directed Center REP's production of "Proposals."
